001	My parents never once suggested I should withdraw from school, ever. Though we loved school, we hadn't realised how important education was until the Taliban tried to stop us. Going to school, reading and doing our homework wasn't just a way of passing time, it was our future.	 Malala Yousafzai, "I Am Malala" 48 words
002	Think about what kind of house you want to live in and how you want to live in it. In other words, describe your ideal lifestyle. If you like drawing, sketch out what it looks like. If you prefer to write, describe it in a notebook.	 Marie Kondo, "Spark Joy" 46 words
003	His main demand was "Simplify!" He would go over each screen of the user interface and apply a rigid test: If he wanted a song or a function, he should be able to get there in three clicks. And the click should be intuitive.	 Walter Isaacson, "Steve Jobs" 44 words
004	Remember that negative stories are more dramatic than neutral or positive ones. Remember how simple it is to construct a story of crisis from a temporary dip pulled out of its context of a long-term improvement.	 Hans Rosling, Ola Rosling, at el "Factfulness" 36 words
005	For the first time in history, more people die today from eating too much than from eating too little; more people die from old age than from infectious diseases; and more people commit suicide than are killed by soldiers, terrorists and criminals combined.	 Yuval Noah Harari, "Homo Deus" 43 words
006	Every morning from five o'clock I would read English in front of the hotel. A lot of foreign visitors came from the USA, from Europe. I'd give them a free tour of West Lake, and they taught me English. For nine years! And I practiced my English every morning, no matter if it snowed or rained.	 Duncan Clark, "Alibaba" 56 words
007	In the last thirty years, women have made more progress in the workforce than in the home. According to the most recent analysis, when a husband and wife both are employed full-time, the mother does 40 percent more child care and about 30 percent more housework than the father.	 Sheryl Sandberg, "Lean In" 49 words
008	Designers understand what people really need. Marketing understands what people actually buy. These are not the same things, which is why both approaches are required: marketing and design researchers should work together in complementary teams.	 Don Norman, "The Design of Everyday Things" 35 words

009	Japanese companies, however, have a very different understanding of knowledge. They recognize that the knowledge expressed in words and numbers represents only the tip of the iceberg. They view knowledge as being primarily “tacit” — something not easily visible and expressible. Ikujiro Nonaka, Hirotaka Takeuchi, “The Knowledge-Creating Company”	 40 words
010	Your smile is a messenger of your good will. Your smile brightens the lives of all who see it. To someone who has seen a dozen people frown, scowl or turn their faces away, your smile is like the sun breaking through the clouds. Dale Carnegie, “How to Win Friends and Influence People”	 44 words
011	"What is love?" I asked. She drew me closer to her and said, "It is here," pointing to my heart, whose beats I was conscious of for the first time. Her words puzzled me very much because I did not then understand anything unless I touched it. Helen Keller, “The Story of my Life”	 47 words
012	For most of us, while money is indeed important, it is not an end in itself. We make money for what it can deliver for us. For most people, a good life would be one with a supportive family, great friends, strong skills and knowledge, and good physical and mental health. Lynda Gratton, Andrew Scott, “The 100-Year Life”	 51 words
013	My father says that if I hit 2,500 balls each day, I'll hit 17,500 balls each week, and at the end of one year I'll have hit nearly one million balls. He believes in math. Numbers, he says, don't lie. A child who hits one million balls each year will be unbeatable. Andre Agassi, “Open”	 52 words
014	In a sense we have two brains, two minds—and two different kinds of intelligence: rational and emotional. How we do in life is determined by both—it is not just IQ, but emotional intelligence that matters. Indeed, intellect cannot work at its best without emotional intelligence. Daniel Goleman, “Emotional Intelligence”	 45 words
015	For students with the growth mindset, it doesn't make sense to stop trying. For them, adolescence is a time of opportunity: a time to learn new subjects, a time to find out what they like and what they want to become in the future. Carol Dweck, “Mindset”	 44 words
016	Back in 2004, I asked Page and Brin what they saw as the future of Google search. “It will be included in people's brains,” said Page. “When you think about something and don't really know much about it, you will automatically get information.” Steven Levy, “In the Plex”	 43 words

017	It's not what happens to us, but our response to what happens to us that hurts us. Of course, things can hurt us physically or economically and can cause sorrow. 018	Many of our most heated debates about justice involve the role of markets: Is the free market fair? Are there some goods that money can't buy—or shouldn't? If so, what are these goods, and what's wrong with buying and selling them?	 Michael J. Sandel, “Justice” 41 words
019	I've met many young people who can articulate a dream—for example, to be a doctor or to play basketball in the NBA—and can vividly imagine how wonderful that would be, but they can't point to the mid-level and lower-level goals that will get them there.	 Angela Duckworth, “Grit” 47 words
020	We need to find God, and He cannot be found in noise and restlessness. God is the friend of silence.
