People who study English as a foreign language often find it hard to learn the spelling of English words. But spelling can also be difficult for native speakers of English. Teachers in the United States sometimes use a contest called a “spelling bee” to help their students become more interested in spelling. The rules of a spelling bee are simple. The teacher reads a word out loud, and a student has to say the letters of the word. If the student makes a mistake, he or she must leave the contest. The last student remaining is the winner.

Students who do well in school spelling bees can go on to local and state contests. If they continue to be successful, they have the chance to take part in a national contest called the Scripps National Spelling Bee. Since 2006, the final rounds of this spelling bee have been shown live on television. The contest has become very popular and it is watched by millions of people.

To win the Scripps National Spelling Bee, students must train very hard. They each receive an official word list for the contest that contains 23,000 words. Many students try to memorize the whole list.

However, not everyone thinks that spelling bees are a good idea. To do well in a spelling bee, students only need to be able to spell words. They do not have to know what they mean. Some people say that it would be better to spend time in class on activities that help students understand the meanings of words. In fact, many of the words in the final of the national contest are so unusual that most people have never even heard of them.

1. To get the chance to participate in the Scripps National Spelling Bee, students must
 - (A) memorize more than 23,000 words.
 - (B) get a recommendation from their parents.
 - (C) become popular with their teachers.
 - (D) do well in local and state contests.

2. According to some people, what is one bad point about spelling bees?
 - (A) They teach students to use too many difficult words.
 - (B) They do not help students learn the meanings of words.
 - (C) They prevent students from doing outdoor activities.
 - (D) They take away time needed to prepare for national contests.
