Indian curry is eaten all around the world, but it is especially popular in Britain. These days, the British even seem to prefer curry to traditional foods such as fish and chips. According to recent reports, the most popular curry is a chicken dish called tikka masala. There are over 8,000 Indian restaurants in Britain, and everybody seems to have a favorite place to eat curry. If people want to eat at home, they can buy takeout curry or ask the restaurant to deliver to their houses. Frozen Indian meals can be found in every supermarket, and there are even curry-flavored potato chips and other snacks.

The first British people to enjoy Indian food were merchants who went to India to trade. However, curry didn't really start becoming popular in Britain until the 1970s, when many people from India came to work in Britain. They opened restaurants and introduced this spicy dish to the public. Today in Britain, Indian restaurants employ a large number of people. There is even a book called The Good Curry Guide published every year. It provides all kinds of information for curry fans, such as lists of restaurants and explanations of the different types of curry.

One British woman recently placed a long-distance order over the Internet to her favorite curry restaurant all the way from Sydney, Australia! She had been sent there by her company, but missed the taste of her favorite curry. Somehow the restaurant was able to deliver the curry to their customer. It seems that some British fans of curry will do anything to get their favorite food.

1. What is the biggest reason why curry became popular in Britain?
   (A) Most people in Britain stopped eating traditional foods such as fish and chips.
   (B) British supermarkets started to sell frozen Indian meals.
   (C) People from India opened many Indian restaurants in Britain.
   (D) British merchants went to India to trade.

2. What is true about the British woman in Sydney mentioned in the passage?
   (A) She reserved a table at her favorite curry restaurant in Britain over the internet.
   (B) She was sent to Sydney by her company to introduce tikka masala to Australia.
   (C) She forgot the taste of her favorite curry.
   (D) She had her favorite curry delivered from Britain.
